

Conducting Family Assessment in End-of-Life Care

Communicating with family members of patient at end of life can be challenging. Family assessment is useful to identify family structure, dynamics, dysfunction, needs and resources which guides the formulation of intervention plan. This one-day workshop is specially designed for health and social care professionals who are interested in family work. Participants will learn theories, effective strategies and practical skills on conducting family assessment.